Minnie Dupree as a Star.

Miss Minnie Dupree in her first venture and Evelyn Greenleaf Sutherland, and is vincingly. Rose de la Noye, the heroine of this Puritan play, is the character Miss Duwill portray. Unlike other girls of hat period, she is chic, brave and lovable, in fact, the entire play is full of delightful characters and is also brimful of incident, and although in the main it is historically correct, neither artistic, scenic effect have been sacrificed by the talented authors. Among those who engage to support Miss Dupree are Augustus Cook, to support Miss Dupree are Augustus Cook, Guy Bates Post, Bennett Sturgis, Douglas Fairbanks, Miss Cornelia Bedford, Mrs. Sol Smith and Miss Edith Wright. The play will be staged under the direction of Mr. Wm. H. Post, well known for his work here this summer with the Arden Company.

Miss Percy Haswell.

When Miss Percy Haswell makes her inithal appearance as a star in this city at Columbia Theater on Monday, September trical history. The author, Capt. R. Marshall, has depicted as the principal feminine personage a young woman who has been bred as a fashionable young lady of the present moment and has plenty of sentiment, but it is of the fleeting and clusive quality, in fact, Angela, the name of this interesting young woman is inclined to scoff at traditions. When it becomes necessary for the preservation of the kingdom to besoring realm she is refractory. Presently she falls desperately in love with this very prince who comes to her father's court in the disguise of a mere count. Then with charming and feminine inconsistency she decides to submit to the sacrifice. Of course, the count discloses himself as the crown prince and after much pouting and pretty confusion Augela marries him. pretty confusion Angela marries him.

Amelia Bingham opened her season in Kansas City last Monday night, appearing in "A Modern Magdalen." The new Willis-Wood theater was dedicated and the audience packed every part of the edifice. "Little Jim" is the name of a new English melodrama. It depicts the murder of a lit-tle boy's mother, the boy being so shocked at the sight that he is stricken dumb. He regains the power of speech, however, when the same villain attempts the murder of his father. It is sad to contemplate what would have happened to the child had he witnessed all of the assassinations with which the piece abounds.

The following is the scene synopsis for one of the most recent "Tracey" melodramas: "Tracey's Home," "The Temptation," "The Salem Penitentiary," "The Escape," "The Portland Train Robbery," "The Cascade Mountains," "The Duel," "The Wheat Field." But this line caps the climax: "Ending with a genuine surprise for those "Ending with a genuine surprise for those who think Tracey committed suicide." This last statement suggests that the good Mr. Tracey may have met with foul play.

Although no date has been definitely fixed for the premiers of Klaw & Erlanger's dra-matic version of Onoto Watanna's story, "A Japanese Nightingale," preparations for it on a most extensive scale are being made. The scenes will be remarkably artistic stage pictures and the costumes will be gor-geously beautiful, imported from. Japan. Klaw & Erlanger will bring to this country a large number of Japanese people to add to the realism of several important scenes and situations. They will make this in every aspect one of the most notable productions ever seen in America.

The play, "The Children of Kings," in which Martin Harvey, supported by his English company, will open his American tour under the direction of Klaw & Erlanger at the Herald Square Theater, New York, October 20, is an adaptation from "Die Konigskinder," by E.
